BACKROUND

Dorian got his first drum set at 6 years old, a 1960's red sparkle Ludwig Kit.
With a healthy dose of Beatles, Stevie Wonder & The Who playing in the house, a full obsession of music was obvious and then nurtured by his mother, and music teachers.
During high school, Heartsong played drums with his first band "Exit". They gained experience in the clubs of the boulder and Denver area.
Upon acceptance to Berklee College of Music he moved to Boston where he would graduate with a songwriting and Performance degree.
Soon after he co-founded Powerman 5000 with Spider One and Allan Pahanish.
Highlights of the Powerman years include an appearance on Conan Obrien show, opening for Kiss on their Reunion Tour 1997, and Powerman's "Tonight The Stars Revolt" album reaching platinum status.
While living in Los Angeles, Pahanish and Heartsong parted ways with Powerman in 2001. Heartsong then joined The Flying Tigers, touring and supporting their self titled record produced by Brendan Obrien.

Dorian then played with Ruby Friedman Orchestra, in and around Los Angeles, while working on a record produced by Michael Beinhorn. That album wasn't released. Heartsong mentions that profound recording experience in a podcast named Recording Studio Rockstars.

Shortly before marrying longtime girlfriend Sydney Poitier, he joined Jason Bonham's Led Zeppelin Experience in 2011. Highlights include playing at Madison Square Garden and The L.A. Forum in support of Peter Frampton and opening for Billy Joel in Seattle and NYC. JBLZE toured the U.S. in 2025 supporting it's 50th anniversary tribute of the 1975 double album "Physical Graffiti."

A Heartsong solo release is slated for early 2026.
